

Privacy and Security

The Seller may disclose this information only within the framework of the existence of an administrative and/or legal obligation. Within the scope of any judicial investigation for which authority has been documented, the Seller may provide the relevant authority with the requested information, provided that the Seller possesses such information.

Credit card information is never stored. Credit card information is used only during the collection/payment transaction by being transmitted securely to the relevant banks in order to obtain authorization, and it is deleted from the system after authorization is obtained.

Information such as the Buyer's e-mail address, postal address and telephone number is used solely by the Seller for standard product delivery and information/notification procedures. During certain periods, campaign information, information about new products, and promotional information may be sent to the Buyer after obtaining the Buyer's consent.

If the Buyer is a merchant natural or legal person and/or the invoice for the product subject to the Agreement is issued in the name of a merchant Buyer, the Buyer cannot benefit from consumer rights and from the provisions of the Law on the Protection of Consumers and other relevant legislation that grant rights and facilities specifically to consumers.
